

The problem with

Bare Banks

Did you know?

Sediment is one of the most common pollutants in our rivers and streams.

Lack of vegetation along a stream can weaken banks and cause soil erosion. This releases sediment into streams. Excess sediment disrupts aquatic habitat, decreases the recreational value of a waterway, and increases water treatment costs.